Absolute 52 Fly

With so many 50ish-foot flybridge boats floating around you may ask what sets this new 52 Fly apart from the pack. Originality for one thing – Absolutes are rare beasts on our shores and you're unlikely to be moored next to another one. The Italian company also knows a thing or two about IPS and its understanding of how to get the best from Volvo's pods is impressive.

The basic design isn't that different from the outgoing 53 Fly but the changes that have been made should make a real improvement to life on board. The main one is the addition of a full-beam owner's suite complete with a giant set of hull windows.

Elsewhere the galley has jumped up from the lower deck to the aft portion of the main deck, keeping the cook in the action and making it very easy to serve the saloon, cockpit and flybridge. Of course, this also creates more space for accommodation. A pair of IPS600 pods should ensure the 52 clears the magic 30-knot mark with ease. Contact Absolute. Tel: +39 0523 354011 Web: www.absoluteyachts.com
